A bit of history

The name Blanchardstown comes from the 'Blanchard' family, who were granted their estate sometime between 1250 and 1260. Almost 90 archaeological monuments are recorded within Dublin 15. Blanchardstown was a dense forest known as the 'Great Scaldwood'.

During years of war and rebellion the wolf population grew and it posed a great danger to local people and livestock.

In 1652 authorities ordered a wolf cull.

In 1640 there were up to 10 brewery houses, locals supplied grain and barley for malting carried out by the local women.
