The act of collecting an unpaid debt from a debtor is known as debt recovery. Anyone can come into a category of a debtor, an individual, as well as a business. In the normal course of business, it is the debt collection agency or the business that collects the debt owed to them. These recovery agencies are hired by the businesses, which are not able to collect the debt on their own. However, there is a plethora of debt recovery agencies working in this arena. You have to choose the best out of the lot. Only then, you can determine how little or how much debt you can recover from the debtor.

With ample of recovery agencies working in this field, one is bound to be confused which one to select. There are various kinds of recovering agencies that are discussed below in detail:

The First Party Agency

The first party recovery agency is the subordinate of the business to which debt is owed. Every business normally has a recovery branch that helps in maintaining a cordial relationship with the customers. The operation of these branches is to recover the debt from the debtor keeping in mind to retain the customer. When the customer defaults on the monthly instalments, these recovery agencies starts working on the solution to recover the debt owed.

The Third Party Agency

It has no connection whatsoever in the original contract taken place between the company and the debtor. These agencies are hired on a percentage basis. Whatever amount of money is recovered from the debtor, these agencies have their commission in that amount. Their cut varies from 10 to 50 percent depending on the kind of measures used to recover the debt. These agencies work on the principle of 'no recovery, no-fee' basis.

Sale Of Debt To A Recovery Agency

This common practice is prevalent in the present era. In such a case, the companies make a sale of the debt to the recovery agency for a certain amount of money. These agencies then start working on the bought cases and whatever they can withdraw out in each case goes into their pocket. The sad part is, at times some of these agencies resort to immoral methods to recover debt.
