Occidental Mindoro emerging as new 'tuna capital'

By Juancho Mahusay (The Philippine Star) | Updated April 7, 2014 - 12:00am

MANILA, Philippines - Changing behavioral patterns of the tuna have proved to be a boon for two towns in Occidental Mindoro, which have seen increasing catches of tuna over the last few years.

This was highlighted during last week's staging of "Tuna-Tonelada Festival," a side event in Mamburao town's founding anniversary celebration, which showcased the abundance of tuna fish in waters around Mindoro island.

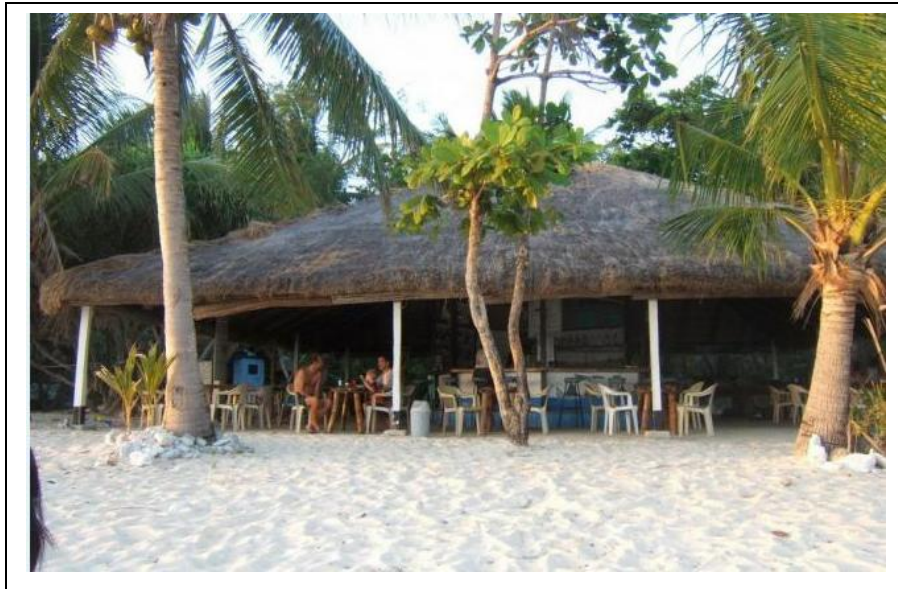

"Today, most of the tuna being exported by the Philippines to Japan, Korea and Australia, to as far as European countries like Switzerland, Germany and United Kingdom, come mostly from Mindoro island, specifically Mamburao and Sablayan municipalities of Occidental Mindoro," noted Joselito Tiongson, site manager for World Wildlife Fund (WWF)-Philippines' Mindoro team.

Mamburao and Sablayan became major suppliers of tuna starting 2008 to 2010 due to changing behavioral patterns of tuna. The fish head to Mindoro Strait, a deep part within the West Philippine Sea, which is now being dubbed by experts and fishermen as the new "tuna highway." The fish choose the central part of the sea channel as their breeding ground.

WWF-Philippines and the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources (BFAR) recorded the biggest tuna catch in Mamburao in the years 2011 to 2012, where an average of 600,000 kilos of tuna delivered around the Philippines and outside the country came from this area.

Dubbed as "Marine Wonderland," the fantastic land that is Occidental Mindoro is endowed with marine beauty from its virgin forests, beautiful white sand beaches, islands and islets rich in marine life, coral gardens, mysterious caves, and cascading waterfalls.

Occidental Mindoro is a diving paradise with so much to offer divers out to discover several unexplored shoals and atolls.

Mt. Iglit in San Jose is a game sanctuary for the tamaraw, a wild animal found nowhere else in the world, bearing a resemblance to the Philippine buffalo, commonly known as carabao. Mamburao boasts of an elongated strip of beach with natural and rustic surroundings. In Lumang Bayan, Sablayan, a five-hectare park overlooking the sea, known as Presing Park, is frequented by promenaders.

Every 25th to 27th of April, residents of San Jose celebrate the Sagnungan, a 3-day thanksgiving festival highlighted by streetdances and parades. Sagnungan is a Mangyan term which means "bayanihan" or the spirit of cooperation, brotherhood, and unity at work - the spirit portrayed by the Mindoreños day-to-day, especially during the planting and the harvesting seasons.
